1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1, 4, 7-8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Maruyama et al (6525856).

Maruyama et al teach a first optical wireless communication apparatus (either 7 or 10) and a second optical wireless apparatus (10 or 7, respectively-the details of which are shown in figure 4). He teaches an optical signal is sent from the first station (which sends signals D2/data and D5/control). He uses this signal with elements 20-25 to control the alignment (x and y axis would obvious control the pan and tilt). He then sends a signal to the first wireless communication apparatus using the transmission means (51) of the second wireless communication apparatus, which is received by the receiving apparatus (57-60) of the first wireless communication apparatus. In regard to the control signal of claims 1 and 4, in that he is controlling a television if the first wireless apparatus is 7, it would have been obvious to control the television (volume, channel with the control signal D5). With regard to claims 7-8 with regard to sending information on conditions, see column 4, lines 33-38. He teaches the signals can be sent by elements 7 and 10. In addition, he shows that the signals between 7 and 10 are bidirectional. In regard to claims 7 and 8, the first wireless communication apparatus would be considered to be element 10 and d wireless communication apparatus would be element 7.
